

Dedicated to Solitude

How pretty you look today, Solitude, dressed with peace and quiet, adorned with soothing colors and a friendly warm smile.

To think that before I went out searching for people that will overshadow your presence!

To think that before I walked guided by loved ones that prevented to fully enjoy your existence!

Now I don't need anyone to tightly slow-dance a love song, nor do I look for company to go out to eat, or to watch scary movies.

And I don't even need a lover to make love, you and your hands know how to extinguish my desires!
Now I come home early to see you, alone you and I doing naughty things around the house, freely playing naked like little girls doing whatever we want.

When in the evening the time has come to close my eyes to dream away I curl up quietly by your side and sweetly whisper to your ear, how beautiful you look tonight, my Solitude!

Veinticuatro Horas

Retumba la alarma a las seis y media ya son las siete y no me levanto con el pelo mojado y las medias rotas vuelvo a llegar tarde al trabajo que trabajo me da soportar al jefe y sus manías a los chismosos y sus miradas y al agua de piringa disfrazada de cafe el escritorio es una tinchera sin armas el cubículo no tapa mi cara dormida y aunque tengo los ojos abiertos sueño, todo el dia sueño...

Salgo tarde del trabajo en casa de extraños busco a mis hijos le pago a quien quieren como a una madre y me pregunto por que trabajo tanto la cocina me espera con los platos sucios el arroz me queda aguado y se me queman las chuletas no tengo tiempo para comer sentada porque hay que bañar los ninos y la tarea está incorrecta y aunque camino tan a prisa sueño, todo el día sueño...

Decido lavar los platos esta noche y barro y mapeo la cocina me acuesto rendida en la cama y cuando me relajo en mi almohada se levanta enfermo el mas chiquito le doy la medicina a empujones llamo al doctor y no contesta le canto una nana hasta la madrugada y con su llanto me desvelo y aunque todavía tengo pulso muero, todo el día muero...

Twenty Four Hours

The alarm thunders at six thirty it's already seven and I'm still in bed with a run in my hose and damp hair late to work again it's so hard to withstand my boss and his habits the gossipers keeping an eye on me and the sewage water disguised as coffee my desk is a weapon-less trench my cubicle doesn't cover my half-asleep face and even though my eyes are open I'm dreaming, all day long I'm dreaming...

I get out of work late again at a stranger's house I pick up my kids I pay the one they love like a mother and I ask myself, why do I work?
The kitchen awaits me with dirty dishes the rice is sticky, the pork chops burnt I don't have time to eat sitting down because I have to bathe the children and the homework is wrong again and even though I walk so fast

I'm dreaming, all day long I'm dreaming...

I decide to wash the dishes tonight and sweep and mop the kitchen

I lay exhausted on my bed and as soon as I get to relax the youngest one wakes up sick I call the doctor and there's no answer I push the medicine down his throat and try to calm him with a lullaby until the morning comes and even though I still have a pulse I'm dying, all day long I'm dying...
