

I CAN FLY

Rusty Barceló

I was born right after the war and not because my Momma needed more and when I came into this world Momma smiled, a girl

She said now you can fly, you can sing, you can do anything you can fly and you can sing, you can do anything

I remember the old backyard my father telling stories to me He talked about love, talked about hate
He told me never to ever wait
He said you can fly, you can sing, you can do anything

Worried my sisters, 1-2-3 Climbing and a-jumping on the orchard trees
I fell down, hurt myself, my three sisters stayed right by me
They said you can fly, you can sing, you can do anything

Playing marbles in the sand filling up my coffee cans neighbors wanted those marbles back my brother said don't you worry about that

He said now you can fly, you can sing, you can do anything

All these years on my own...I never really ever feel too alone

But when I am down kind of low well, I just sing these words I know I can fly, I can sing, I can do most anything Momma, Dad, Sisters, Brother said anything
